NIKKO AM GLOBAL EQUITY UNHEDGED STRATEGY

Assets are held in the Nikko AM NZ Wholesale Global Equity Fund. The Nikko AM Global Equity Fund (retail) invest in units in the wholesale fund, which the commentary refers to.

Market Overview

October was a better month for global equities, with the MSCI ACWI climbing around 6% in US Dollar terms. As ever, these days, the driver of the recovery was the hope / expectation of a gradual shift in approach by the US Federal Reserve, when setting monetary policy. Economic data has continued to accumulate, suggesting that the Fed has already tightened money supply enough to lead to a marked slowdown in economic activity in the US (and globally) during 2023, with year-on-year growth in gauges such as M2 almost in contraction now – following months of unsustainable expansion during the early stages of the global COVID pandemic.

Fund Highlights

- Royal London (+211 bp) was the main driver of the month's outperformance with a return of 5.35%. NAME (+4 bps) was marginally ahead of the benchmark with a return of 3.28%, while WCM (-35 bps) trailed but still generated a strong return of 2.89%.
- The main sources of value add were: underweights to the poor performing communication services, real estate and utilities sectors, overweights to the outperforming industrials and healthcare sectors, nil exposure to underperforming Chinese equities, stock selection in the consumer discretionary and materials sectors
- Relative performance was negatively impacted by: underweight to the outperforming energy sector, overweight to the underperforming consumer discretionary sector, stock selection in the information technology and consumer staples sectors.

Market Commentary

October was a better month for global equities, with the MSCI ACWI climbing around 6% in US Dollar terms. As ever, these days, the driver of the recovery was the hope / expectation of a gradual shift in approach by the US Federal Reserve, when setting monetary policy. Economic data has continued to accumulate, suggesting that the Fed has already tightened money supply enough to lead to a marked slowdown in economic activity in the US (and globally) during 2023, with year-on-year growth in gauges such as M2 (US money stock held by the non-bank public) almost in contraction now - following months of unsustainable expansion during the early stages of the global COVID pandemic. The best performing sector this October was (once again) Energy. Although oil prices have remained well below levels seen earlier in the year, there remains a sense that this is due to a combination of short-term factors that are likely to resolve more quickly than new reserves can be discovered and brought onstream. The US Strategic Petroleum Reserve has already been depleted significantly and Chinese demand won't be restrained by its zero-COVID policy forever. Industrials were the other major outperformers, with strength being seen across sub-sectors – from aerospace and defence to more traditional capital goods providers (like Caterpillar). The worst performers in October were a combination of traditionally defensive sectors (such as Utilities and Real Estate) and sectors where benchmark heavyweights had a pronounced impact on returns. This was true in both Communication Services (where the decline in digital advertising saw significant share price weakness in Meta and Alphabet) and Consumer Discretionary (where the main culprits were Amazon and Tesla – both of whom have disappointed investors with their latest set of financial results).

Fund Commentary

The fund outperformed the benchmark return in October and performance continues to be exceptionally strong over the longer term as well over the three-year period to 31 October 2022, the fund returned 13.01% p.a., outperforming the Benchmark return of 8.36% p.a. by a very significant margin of 4.65% p.a. This level of outperformance was generated with a relatively low ex-post tracking error of 3.64%. In risk-adjusted terms, this equates to an information ratio (outperformance / tracking error) of 1.28. Royal London (+211 bps) was the main driver of the month's outperformance with a return of 5.35%. NAME (+4 bps) was marginally ahead of the benchmark with a return of 3.28%, while WCM (-35 bps) trailed but still generated a strong return of 2.89%. NAME's allocation remains around 30% while WCM is at 22%, with the balance of 1.5% held in cash. Royal London's holdings made the largest contribution to the fund's outperformance in October. NAME benefitted from Elevance Health, Encompass Health and Deere & Co, while Carlisle Companies, Taiwan Semiconductor and Tenet Healthcare were its top detractors. For WCM, its top performers in October were LPL Financial Holdings, Visa Inc and Amphenol Corp, while AIA Group, Pernod Ricard and Waste Connections detracted the most value.
