

Nikko AM NZ Corporate Bond Strategy

Monthly Update 30 June 2025

Assets are held in the Nikko AM Wholesale NZ Corporate Bond Fund. The Nikko AM NZ Corporate Bond Fund (retail) and the GoalsGetter KiwiSaver Scheme Nikko AM NZ Corporate Bond Fund invest in units in the wholesale fund, which the commentary refers to.

Market Overview

- NZ bond markets had a reasonable quarter with interest rates finishing flat to lower.
- Yield curves remain steep with longer government bonds trading higher than swap rates in NZ.
- NZ bond issuance remains limited which should continue to support credit margins.

Fund Highlights

- Performance has been supported by a higher fund yield from quality credit holdings.
- Credit and NZ Government bonds were the better performing sectors over the quarter.
- We expect the funds will perform well over the medium term with short rates low and carry and roll providing a larger contribution to returns over the medium term.

Market Commentary

NZ bonds had a good month in June and a reasonable quarter with yields finishing flat to slightly lower. The fund's higher income accrual supported outperformance as did the move lower in rates. The fund has been positioned with a longer duration than benchmark with a higher yield than their benchmark and we expect the fund to perform well when rates are stable to lower.

Uncertainty remains elevated but perhaps markets have become used to this? Over the quarter both bond and equity markets "bounced around" but the moves in June weren't large considering the significant geopolitical events and their potential impacts, e.g. Middle East and higher Oil prices. Over the quarter downward Interest rate moves for NZ government bonds were 1yr 25bp, 5yr 14bps, 10yr 5bps, and the longest 2054 bond 5bps. NZ Swap rates were 1yr 20bps, 5yr 9bps, 10yr 3bps.

In terms of sector performance credit recovered well (following the "tariff tantrum") and was helpful supporting a higher income accrual than benchmark. NZ government bonds performed better than similar maturities of swaps which was helpful as we have been increasing our government bond holdings, however remain underweight the government bond sector where benchmark relevant.

The NZ economic data was generally positive with a strong Terms of Trade and GDP surprising on the upside - underlining that recovery had started. Unfortunately, in terms of intentions and outlook the forward-looking surveys paint a weaker picture with some inflationary pressures, e.g.; higher energy, and fuel costs including the desire of business to raise prices (although this would be difficult with weak demand). Overall, the general view remains that the spillover of the US trade war is expected to be growth negative.

With uncertainty elevated many central banks have become less explicit in their forward guidance and highlighted that future decisions will likely be highly data dependent. In terms of boosting activity in the NZ economy, the RBNZ has talked about the lagged effects of stimulus working through the economy and they could take a pause soon, but fortunately there is further scope to lower rates if need be.

We expect short term rates to remain low through 2025 supporting the front of the yield curve. Longer maturity bonds have remained at elevated levels due to increased issuance pressuring term premiums higher. The curve is steep in shape and looks attractive in terms of carry and roll which should provide a positive contribution to returns over the medium term. NZ bond issuance (ex-governments) remains limited which should support credit margins as demand outweighs supply.

Fund Commentary

The fund had a positive return of 0.83% for the month of June and 1.51% for the quarter which was ahead of its benchmark the Bloomberg Credit Index which returned 0.76% for June and 1.35% over the quarter.

The higher fund yield was helpful over the quarter and the longer duration position also added value over the quarter with interest rates finishing lower in yield. Month-to-month returns bounced around due to elevated uncertainty and resultant moves up and down in interest rates. NZ credit margins quickly recovered (post widening in April) and should remain well supported with limited issuance. We continue to maintain a longer duration with a steep yield curve and expect carry and roll will support returns over the medium term.
