Commentary

The Relative Value strategy (April: -0.06% vs. HFRX Relative Value +0.20% / YTD: +0.42% vs. +1.23%) was slightly lower for the month with one negative outlier. The manager, a Volatility Event fund, lost money in a difficult environment for their strategy given low levels of realized and implied volatility and a dearth of health care events during the month. Offsetting most of these losses, however, was a Multi-Strategy manager that has launched several activist campaigns. During the month, the manager succeeded in its efforts to promote Japan's new corporate governance code when a parent company moved cash back to a publicly owned subsidiary. Other gains came from a Statistical Arbitrage fund that employs a machine learning approach to trading US equities across market caps with a ~10 day time horizon.

The Opportunistic/Macro strategy (April: -0.20% vs. HFRX Macro -0.07% / YTD: +0.15% vs. -0.82%) was slightly lower for the month. While there were no major drivers in the strategy, Discretionary Macro managers detracted and Reinsurance partially offset losses.

The Long/Short Equities strategy (April: +2.21% vs. HFRX Equity Hedge +0.72% / YTD: +9.67% vs. +3.44%) was up solidly for the month and outperformed the strategy index. Nearly all managers were up for the month with the biggest contribution coming from a European manager that made money in both its large and small cap funds. Positions that added to performance included a German industrial supply manufacturer that won a key contract, a food delivery service company and a pet supplies company that were both up on strong earnings, and a European brick manufacturer that provided strong guidance. A technology, media and telecom (TMT) specialist made money in a pharmaceuticals company that reached a settlement regarding a patent litigation and a software company that launched a new subscription-based pricing plan. In Asia, a manager profited from a Chinese online retailer that announced they will be opening a large number of drone centers to expand their delivery service capabilities and reduce shipping costs, and a semiconductor manufacturer that is considering divesting a business unit.

Merger Arbitrage/Event Driven managers (April: -0.03% vs. HFRX Event Driven +0.70% / YTD: +0.77% vs. +3.67%) were negative for the month. The only meaningful detractor was a Multi-Event Driven manager that lost money in energy-related positions.

The Credit strategy (April: +0.32% vs. HFRX Distressed +0.59% / YTD: +0.75% vs. +2.18%) was up for the month with the biggest contribution coming from a fund that is seeking to profit from mispricings in the debt of Puerto Rico. During the month, GO bonds on the island reversed some of the losses experienced in March. Our Litigation Finance manager also contributed during the month. Offsetting some of these gains were losses from a Corporate Credit RV manager and a Corporate-Distressed manager that was positioned short fixed income during the month.
