

Nikko AM NZ Corporate Bond Strategy

Monthly Update 30 April 2025

Assets are held in the Nikko AM Wholesale NZ Corporate Bond Fund. The Nikko AM NZ Corporate Bond Fund (retail) and the GoalsGetter KiwiSaver Scheme Nikko AM NZ Corporate Bond Fund invest in units in the wholesale fund, which the commentary refers to.

Market Overview

- April was a volatile month with US policy uncertainty spilling over into financial market volatility.
- Yield curve remains steep and should garner more investor interest at some stage with longer government bond trading higher than swap rates.
- NZ bond issuance remains limited which should continue to support credit margins.

Fund Highlights

- NZ bonds had a good month with rates finishing lower after a turbulent month.
- Swap rates performed marginally better than NZ bonds.
- We expect the funds will perform well over the medium term as the cash rate continues lower and carry and roll makes a larger contribution to returns with a positive shaped yield curve.

Market Commentary

NZ bonds delivered strong positive returns for April as interest rates finished lower. There were however turbulent times during the month as US policy uncertainty spilled into financial markets causing some large swings in assets prices.

Both the NZ and US 10-year bonds traded in an approximately 60bps range spiking upwards following much higher tariffs announcements. For the fund it was more an opportunity than a headwind - we were well placed for liquidity, and took the opportunity to add some duration at cheaper levels which was helpful by month end. In a sign of quality NZ bond markets again fared better than offshore with markets, continuing to function and credit margins only marginally wider by month end. Interest rate moves for NZ government bonds were 1yr -29bp, 5yr -21bps, 10yr -13bps, and the longest 2054 bond -2bps. NZ Swap rates were 1yr -31bps, 5yr -25bps, 10yr -18bps. Swaps performed marginally better than government bonds as government bond margins widened again.

Looking forward, there remains considerable uncertainty, but the spillover of the US trade war is likely to be growth negative and deflationary for NZ. Crude Oil prices have fallen approximately 15% and the NZD has bounced around 10% from its lows as the US has become less popular in general. There is increased likelihood that the RBNZ could take the cash rate lower and stay there for longer if we see further deterioration in our data outcomes.

With short rates lower and a steep yield curve longer term bonds look attractive in terms of carry and roll and should provide a positive contribution to returns over the medium term. We like quality credit for extra yield, and we receive a higher credit margin for investing longer as well as benefiting from the steep yield curve. There has been very limited new bond issuance in the local market (ex-government bonds) and with demand outweighing supply we expect NZ credit margins to remain well supported.

Fund Commentary

The fund returned 0.93% for April, ahead of the benchmark the Bloomberg Credit Index that returned 0.77%.

The move lower in interest rates was the main driver of return over the month, with the longer duration positioning helpful. We did add some longer maturity bonds at better levels during the month. Credit holdings widened in margin with volatility but finished little changed by month end. NZ swaps outperformed government bonds, but the impact was relatively neutral for the fund. We continue to maintain a longer duration with a steep yield curve and expect carry and roll will support returns over the medium term.
